COWBOY CHUCKWAGON PHILOSOPHY

COWBOY CHUCKWAGON PHILOSOPHY

Written by Corbett Mason

Synopsis

It is said, "A philosopher is one who supposedly meets all events, favorably or unfavorably, with calmness and composure." Evidently Mr. Webster was never in a bar-fight, shot at or hung up on a bucking bull or horse. Nonetheless we all become something of a philosopher on our way through life. These writings speak of family, joy, travail, love, labor, wisdom, death, government and a touch of Hopi religion. We will experience many things during our lifetime. The spinning wheel of life brings forth: Birth, youth, middle age, hopefully old age and then comes death; the best we can hope for is that our passing is as easy as putting a canoe in the water or as peaceful as the setting sun. A cowboy living in a line shack, riding fence, checking cattle or even breaking horses to ride spends a considerable amount of time alone. This gives him the peace and solitude to reflect on his life and the mistakes he's made in it. I have yet to meet a man who has lived without creating problems for his self or others. As we are our own worst enemy and all of our actions have repercussions.

Customer Reviews

This is a good book of poems that are of home spun philosophy. That is a great way to relax and just enjoy the outlook on life.
